END-POINT ASSESSMENTS with the IMI

The IMI are proud to be the leading EPAO
(End-Point Assessment Organisation) for automotive apprenticeship standards in England.

As the only Professional Body dedicated to the professional development of individuals working in the automotive sector, we see apprenticeships as vital in supporting new talent entering our industry. Our extensive and sector specific offer as an EPAO plays a crucial role in ensuring work ready individuals enter the workforce upon completion of their apprenticeship.

WHAT IS AN END-POINT ASSESSMENT?

End-Point Assessments (EPA) are a series of assessments an apprentice needs to undertake which tests their abilities to carry out the job they have been training for throughout their apprenticeship. IMI provides independent assessment of the apprentices during their EPA.

WHY ARE END-POINT ASSESSMENTS IMPORTANT?

End-Point Assessments are important as they test an apprentice's knowledge, behaviours and skills required to carry out the specific job role they have been training for. Each apprenticeship standard will have different assessment methods which make up an EPA. Upon successful completion of all assessments, each apprentice will receive their achievement certificate and be considered 'qualified'.

WHY CHOOSE THE IMI AS YOUR EPAO?

The IMI have developed a comprehensive EPA offer, providing an outstanding end to end service to apprentices, employers and training providers:
